THURSDAY, JANUARY 1, 1863.

Lieut. Col. Jones with the remainder of our regiment has united with the 49th Ohio and commands both. Col. Gibson of the 49th O.V. commands the brigade. Co. "A" of our regiment has but 1 officer present. Co. "B" and "C" none at all. Co. "D" 2 present. Co. "F" and "G" one each. "I" 2 present and "K" two. Capt. Graham has 4 co's under his command numbering but 53 men (R. C. E. & H.) Another stampede occured to day but was stopped at once. Fighting all day.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 2, 1863.

Our men hold their own on the line yet. Our boys took a considerable number of prisoners to day.

Our boys were in the charge made to night and we drove the "reb's" back at the point of the bayonet capturing one whole battery.

We lay on the line all night hundreds of shells passed over us but only 4 hurt.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 3, 1863.

I turned my horse over to Lieut. Scott C. "I" Acting Adjutant. Heavy skirmishing all day. About dark our centre commenced an attack and after heavy fighting for two hours drove the "reb's" back and took possession of one of their rifle-pits. Rained all day and night.

Our Army's loss is terrible this makes 8 days since we commenced skirmishing and 4 days on the line.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 4, 1863.

Heavy skirmishing all day along the front.

MONDAY, JANUARY 5, 1863.

The rebels have vacated Murfreesboro and are on the retreat.
In the afternoon I went over with Lt. Col. Jones and Capt. Herring with some 30 of our regiment over to the battle-ground of Dec. 31. 1862. We found a good many of our dead — they have been gathered together and tomorrow will be buried. I saw Billy Todd up at one of the negro houses used as a hospital. He may recover but I think it is doubtful.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1863.

Col. Jones. Capt. Stevens no. Lt. Foote and myself went over to the different hospitals on horseback to see our wounded boys. I saw none of our company except John Kreller. James Corby. William Todd and Jashes Gore. They are all wounded severely and the chances of recovery are against them.
Lt. Neal of Co. B. and Act. Adjt. went to Nashville to day in a ambulance. He cannot live more than 24 hours at the farthest.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 7, 1863.

We moved through Murfreesboro and out the Shelbyville pike about 4 miles where we pitched tents. Regiment went on picket immediatly.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 8, 1863.

Boys returned from picket. Rained all day. very muddy.

This is "Camp Dill".

FRIDAY, JANUARY 9, 1863.

Rosecrans has issued an order refusing to parole rebel officers until they parole ours.

Got 3 letters this evening One from home. One from Charley Randall and one from George Geiling.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 10, 1863.

Regiment went out on a reconnoissance — returned safe seeing nothing out of the way.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 11, 1863.

Moved camp this morning about one mile to the left and close by the rail-road.

MONDAY, JANUARY 12, 1863.

All quiet here—
I have had more writing to do than I ever had before as the Adjutant is not here and the Sergt. Major is captured.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 13, 1863.

Regiment went foraging got all the wagons loaded and returned safe.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 14, 1863.

Usual routine of duty in the office.
Rained all day.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 15, 1863.

Still raining.
