Keweenaw NHP Superintendent's Report – January 22, 2008

Appropriations News

□ The FY08 NPS appropriation was signed at the end of 2007. Included in the KEWE budget is approximately $500,000 for planning for the Union Building. The Advisory Commission was also appropriated $200,000. Actuals will likely be less due to a last minute 1.56% reduction.

Heritage Site Activities

- I am presenting the commission with a list of many of the observations and suggestions made during my visits and conversations with Heritage Site partners. I and Management Assistant Tom Baker will be continuing these site visits this year.
- Park staff is developing a strategy for enhancing the orientation of KHS staffs to the visitor orientation tools in the park newspaper and via the KHS poster and KHS stamp brochure.
- Agreements have been executed for 14 of 19 Keweenaw Heritage Sites.

Planning Activities

- Park facility planning – a workshop with all park staff and Advisory Commission participation will take place January 30 and 31. This will lead to one or more concepts for future facility development and possibly acquisition. Most critical are decisions related to the Union Building. The park has received funds for the planning of the interior rehabilitation and interpretive exhibits. The construction funds are anticipated in 2009. Some NEPA-compliance may be necessary for recommendations not specifically itemized in the GMP.
- Smelter planning – Three paths are being followed by the park and Franklin Township to secure the preservation of the Quincy Smelting Works: 1) regular discussions with EPA and MDEQ to address contamination remediation and its potential funding 2) discussions with the Michigan Historical Center to pursue State involvement in stabilization, preservation, and/or operation and 3) seeking alternative funding sources for stabilization. Franklin Township is also involved with the Save the Smelter organization as they develop a strategy for the preservation and reuse of the Smelter.
- Quincy Unit Cultural Landscape Report – 2nd Phase to begin this coming year, with recommendations for landscape treatment. Some delay may occur as we conclude the development planning, above.
- “Core operations” planning – Midwest Regional Office staff will facilitate a park workshop evaluating future budget projections and their impact on park staffing and operations. Recommendations for reducing park operating expenses and both a reduced and a target (enhanced) organizations chart will result.
- Scope of Collections Statement – Acting Chief Curator Brian Hoduski is planning a workshop among park staff and KAC participants to revise the draft park document that prescribes the types of objects the park will add to its museum collection.

Other Activities:

□ The park is entering into a partnership with the National Parks of Lake Superior Foundation. The NPLSF mission is to raise funds for each of the five national parks on Lake Superior.

Division of Museum, Archives & Historical Services
22 January 2008

Highlights & Issues

1. Part-time Temporary Museum Technician Hired. Michigan Technology University industrial archeology graduate student, John Griebel began work for KNHP on January 7, 2008. He has assumed the regular museum housekeeping and collections care duties of the museum technician position vacated by Kit Murley. The position is part-time (20 hours per week) and is funded through 30 September.
2. Museum Housekeeping and Collections Care Workshop – May 20-21, 2008. As the third installment in an ongoing museum training program for park partners, KNHP will be hosting a museum housekeeping and collections care workshop 20-21 May 2008 at the park's Keweenaw History Center. There will be no tuition charged to participants. If funding is available, each Keweenaw Heritage Site represented at the workshop will be provided a museum-quality HEPA vacuum cleaner for use at their site.
3. Scope of Collection Statement (SOCS) Workshop. The document which guides museum collection acquisition by KNHP, its Scope of Collection Statement, will be reviewed, February 12, 2008, in a workshop at the Keweenaw History Center. Participants will include park staff and KAC commissioners. The workshop will review the current document, the state of existing park holdings, the history of collections use and anticipated use at KNHP, and the nature and quality of collections held by other institutions. Based on those findings participants will recommend refinements to the scope of collecting at KNHP, recommend collecting priorities, and recommend a strategy or strategies to assist park partners with their acquisition programs.
4. Service-wide Comprehensive Call. Completed January 15, 2008, the service-wide comprehensive call is the principle means by which prospective park projects and programs are submitted for consideration by NPS funds managers. MAHS division projects were prepared and/or reviewed and updated by staffers Brian Hoduski and Jo Urion. Notably, projects were updated for the implementation of the Service-wide Multi-park Museum Collection Storage Facility Plan for four of five Lake Superior national parks (Apostle Islands, Isle Royale, Keweenaw, and Pictured Rocks) to share a consolidated storage facility at Keweenaw; and for the researching and writing of an “Historic Resources Evaluation and Management Plan” that when complete will help guide park and commission decision-makers in caring for historic resources on the Keweenaw Peninsula.

- MAHS Division Annual Work Plan. Approved November 29, 2007, the division’s FY2008 annual work plan has been provided Commission members. The plan details the scope, extent, and priority of work to be accomplished this fiscal year. Major work themes include: acquisition, documentation, care, and use of museum, archives, and library collections; the provision of technical assistance to park partners; planning; compliance; historical research; facility improvement; outreach and education; and oral history. Notably, park historian Jo Urion will be researching and preparing a KNHP Administrative History overview. Commission members who participated in the founding of the park who have not been previously interviewed may be contacted for information.
- 5. Keweenaw History Center Construction. Delayed by engineering questions, the heating system upgrade and restroom/cloakroom addition at the Keweenaw History Center have been put on hold. It is hoped work will resume soon.
- 6. KNHP Acquires Red Jacket Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church Records. A complete set of church records from the Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church formerly located on 6th Street next to the Red Jacket Fire Station has been acquired by the park.
- 7. “Collections” Page Added to KNHP Website - Finding Aids On-line. A “Collections” page has been added to the park’s website. Visitors to the park’s website can now read an overview of the park’s museum program, access a “Guide to Museum and Archival Collections” and with one click on the “Researcher Information” link plan and schedule a research visit to the Keweenaw History Center. From the guide to collections, finding aids for the park’s Sanborn Map Company Insurance Map collection, Richard and June Ross genealogical collection, and Margaret Blander and Helmi Warren family papers can now be accessed as PDF files by researchers.
- 8. Keweenaw Heritage Center at St. Anne’s Exhibit Workshop. MAHS staffers Jo Urion and Jeremiah Mason attended the Keweenaw Heritage Center’s December 13-14, 2007 exhibit development workshop, facilitated by Wayne State University’s Walter Reuther Library Director Mike Smith.

They participated in wide-ranging discussions on exhibit themes and development for the Heritage Center. Both remain involved in the exhibit development process. In addition, Mike Smith met separately with MAHS staffers Brian Hoduski and Jo Urion, Dick Dana of Coppertown, and KAC Chair Kim Hoagland regarding the upcoming centennial of the 1913 Copper Miners Strike.

9. FY2008 Research Conducted at the Keweenaw History Center. To-date, 50 individual research visits or reference requests have been made or processed.

Description and Update on the Oral History Program at KNHP
1/22/08

Introduction

I'll go over the reports main points and answer questions. I'll go over the program's background and the three oral history collections we've created, and briefly discuss the interviews, outline and then update you on the program's status.

Background

The goal of the program is to document the history of people involved in the local mining industry and related businesses. The park had and has three main reasons for starting this project:

1. form a publicly accessible research collection of tapes and transcripts;
2. provide information to park staff engaged in managing structures and landscapes;
and
3. inform interpretive efforts.

Outreach is also an important goal.

So we've conducted workshops on oral history methods.

Workshops have been designed for university and high school classes, local history groups (particularly the Northlands Consortium and the Chassell Heritage Organization), genealogists, Elderhostel groups, and agencies like Little Brothers/Friends of the Elderly.

Therefore, the oral history program at the park is involved not only with creating and using our own collections, but helping others in the region record first-person history as well.

Collections

The park has assembled 3 main oral history collections.

1. A collection of interviews documenting the history of local hockey with the City of Houghton.

2. The Administrative History collection, documenting the park's creation and operation. and
3. The park's main oral history project documenting local mining history in general. This includes interviews generated by park staff and volunteers, as well as tapes and transcripts that have been donated them to the park.

Interviews and Informants

I've included a list of people that we've interviewed, and indicated how many times they've been interviewed and if there's a transcript available.

Who have we interviewed?

Interviews have been conducted with former mining company employees (miners, hoist engineers, timbermen, pattern makers, clerks, accountants, mill workers, and more) and other people in the community (teachers, pastors, barkeepers, local government officials, nurses, musicians, and others). Most interviews have been conducted locally, but others have taken place in Wisconsin, California, and New York.

What have they discussed?

People have shared first-hand accounts of mining, explosions, air blasts, and other accidents; and other aspects of working underground. Surface workers have explained milling and reclamation, casting copper, and managing the corporate side of things.

People have provided personal perspectives of immigration and ethnicity, recreation, military service, and many other topics. The interviews form a rich collection for researchers interested in mining but also local culture, and language.

How is this information being used?

Information learned from oral history interviews is used in interpretive exhibits (such as the timeline at Quincy, which includes a quote from C&H's former head geologist) and guided tours of Calumet's industrial and commercial cores. Interview clips have also been played during school programs, formal presentations at regional and national conferences, and workshops.

Process

I have conducted a majority of the park's interviews, but Brian Hoduski, Jeremiah Mason, Abby Sue Fisher, and Tom Baker have also conducted interviews, as have volunteers like Melissa Davis. Kathleen Harter has also participated in the project.

Styles

Each person is different, so while the format of interviews is consistent, each interview is unique.

Questions

There is a standard list of questions for the general oral history project. These act as a kind of control. These questions are about ethnicity and family background, educational experiences, religion, recreational activities, and cultural traditions. These control questions are supplemented with questions that relate specifically to the interviewee's life and work. For example, when talking to a former mill worker, topics will include discussion about their specific duties, job hazards, and what the mill sounded like. Obviously, it helps if you avoid questions that can be answered with simple yes and no answers.

Following tangents and actively listening to what your informant is saying is very important.

Making the Interviews Accessible

Once the interview has been conducted, tapes need to be copied and accessioned into the park's museum collection. This effectively brings them into the public domain, and available to researchers.

Transcribing is a very important part of making them available to researchers. Our transcripts include a summary of the interview as well as an index, which makes it easier to find information. Depending on your skill as a typist, it can take anywhere from a couple of hours to a day to transcribe one hour of recorded tape. For a time the park was able to pay transcribers, including Jane Nordberg and Melissa Davis. Now we are extremely lucky to have two talented volunteers – Anita Campbell and Lois Winquist – who are helping us tackle the backlog.

Status

As mentioned, the project's pace has slowed. This is primarily due to growing demands on my time. Oral history requires an incredible investment of time – the interview itself is only a fraction of the work required.

Preliminary background research and/or interviewing, the interview itself (which generally takes a half a day to complete), and then processing the interview by making copies, accessioning them into the museum collection, and transcribing, all takes an enormous amount of time and energy.

However, interviews are still being conducted. I will be conducting a minimum of 10 oral history interviews this fiscal year. We are in the process of cataloging the collections, and we will produce a finding aid for the general oral history project by Spring.
