PREFACE

This document, the Finding Aid for the Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (1807-1882) Family Papers, 1768-1972 (Bulk dates 1825-1950), describes the personal papers of the renowned poet and of his siblings and children. The bulk of this collection was present in the collections of the Longfellow House before the National Park Service assumed control in 1972. Staff from the Northeast Museum Services Center (NMSC) catalogued the papers from Spring 2003 to January 2004 with FY 2002 Backlog Cataloging funds; NMSC staff added previously unidentified items to the collection in 2006 with FY2006 Backlog Cataloging funds.

The cataloguers would like to express their gratitude towards the Longfellow National Historic Site (LONG) staff, particularly Anita Israel, Archives Specialist, Janice Hodson, former Supervisory Curator, David Daly, Collections Manager, Lauren Malcolm, now Museum Technician, and Jim Shea, Site Manager.

RESTRICTIONS

The copyright law of the United States (Title 17, United States Code) governs the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted materials. The Privacy Act of 1974 (5 United States Code 552a) governs the use of materials that document private individuals, groups and corporations.

Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a reproduction if the document does not infringe the privacy rights of an individual, group or corporation. These specified conditions of authorized use include:

- non-commercial and non-profit study, scholarship, research or teaching
- criticism or commentary
- as a National Park Service preservation or security copy for research use
- as a research copy for deposit in another institution

If the researcher later uses a copy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," the researcher is personally liable for copyright, privacy, or publicity infringement and agrees to indemnify the NPS from any legal action as a result of the error. Permission to obtain a photographic, xerographic, digital or other copy of a document does not indicate permission to publish, exhibit, perform, reproduce, sell, distribute or prepare derivative works from the document without permission from the copyright holder and from any private individual, group or corporation shown or otherwise recorded.

Permission to publish, exhibit, perform, reproduce, prepare derivative works from, sell or otherwise distribute the item must be obtained separately in writing from the holder of the original copyright (or if the creator is dead from his/her heirs) as well as from any individual(s), groups or corporations whose name, image, recorded words or private information (e.g. employment information) may be reproduced in the source material. The holder of the original copyright is not necessarily the National Park Service. The National Park Service is not legally liable for copyright, privacy or publicity infringement when materials are wrongfully used after being provided to researchers for "fair use."

This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copying order if fulfillment of the order is judged in violation of copyright or federal or state privacy or publicity law. This institution also places restrictions on the use of cameras, photocopiers and scanners in the research room.

INTRODUCTION

The Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (1807-1882) Family Papers, 1768-1972 (bulk dates 1825-1950) constitute one of the most important collections of the Longfellow National Historic Site. They contain not only documents collected by and related to Longfellow but also hold correspondence, diaries, and reminiscences by his children and siblings which reveal substantial biographical information about their father and brother. The papers, in addition, give insight into the daily life of Longfellow's two homes – the Craigie House (now known as the Vassall-Craigie-Longfellow House) at the Longfellow National Historic Site in Cambridge and the Wadsworth-Longfellow House in Portland, Maine, his boyhood home.

Many of Longfellow's documents in this collection have stayed in the Craigie House since his death in 1882. (The Longfellow House Trust deposited his journals, manuscripts, and most of his letters at Houghton Library, Harvard University in 1954, and they were later sold to that institution.) His grandson and namesake, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana (1881-1950), brought the majority of these family papers to the House and its archives in the twentieth century.¹ For example, Dana's cousin, Mary King Longfellow (1852-1945), most likely conveyed the papers of Longfellow's sister Anne Longfellow Pierce (1810-1901), which remained in the Wadsworth-Longfellow House throughout the nineteenth century, to Dana in the Craigie House. Dana brought together his mother Edith's papers from her home at 113 Brattle Street with the legal files from his father Richard Henry Dana III (1851-1931) concerning her estate. The descendants of Longfellow's daughter Anne Allegra Longfellow Thorp donated a portion of her personal papers.² In addition, Dana purchased documents and subscribed to a newsclipping service. He and his research associates including Thomas de Valcourt arranged these papers, adding their research notes.

After the transfer of the house and its collection to National Park Service in 1972, NPS staff gathered the papers scattered throughout the house and placed them into the archives. Several subsequent publications including the Historic Furnishings Report for the site relied heavily on these materials.³ Employees from the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities (SPNEA), hired under an agreement with NMSC, surveyed the unprocessed archival material in the LONG archives in February 2001 with LONG Archives Specialist Anita Israel. In December 2001 and January 2002, Jennifer Lyons, at that time the NPS/SPNEA Archivist, roughly arranged the collections based on the survey results. SPNEA Cataloguer Lauren Malcolm and SPNEA Senior Cataloguers Mary P. ("Pat") Perreault and Cary Donahue further arranged and described the collections with NPS/SPNEA Archivist Margaret Welch acting as lead cataloguer

from April 2003 to January 2004. Giles Parker, NMSC Deputy Director, David Vecchioli, Regional Archivist, and Melissa Underhill, NPS/SPNEA Collections Manager, supervised the project with LONG Curator Janice Hodson and Ms. Israel also providing guidance. Ms. Welch added hitherto unidentified or misattributed materials, including items found in books owned by the various family members, to the collection in 2006

The arrangement most likely established by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana and Thomas de Valcourt has been maintained wherever it has been discerned. For example, Dana apparently extracted Mary Greenleaf's voluminous correspondence to her sister Anne from Anne's papers and placed them into Mary's. The bulk of the collection is organized into series relating to Longfellow, his children and their families, and his siblings and their families.

The collection was catalogued according to archival and NPS standards. Materials were rehoused in acid-free folders and archives boxes. Paper clips, staples and other fasteners were removed. Fragile organic materials such as dried plants and hair and oversize materials were removed and appropriately rehoused in separate boxes. Acidic newsprint was placed in inert polyester sleeves with buffered paper backing and also moved to separate boxes. The highly acidic pages and the carbon copies whose ink is fading in many of the legal papers were also photocopied and removed. Photographs were removed and rehoused and catalogued according to the procedures established for earlier photograph cataloguing projects including an item-level record created in the NPS collections management software ANCS+. In the above cases, separation sheets marking the original location were created.

- Quantity: 26 linear feet (approximately 41,600 items).
- Storage: 49 5” legal size archives boxes, 3 2 ½” legal size archives box; 14 flat boxes; 2 4x5x12” short lid boxes; 1 5X7X4” negative box, 1 5x7x12” short lid box; 2 8x10x12” photo boxes; 26 24x36” map folders; 7 36x48” map folders.
- Location: Longfellow National Historic Site, 105 Brattle Street, Cambridge, Massachusetts 02138-3407, (617) 876-4491.
- Description: The Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (1807-1882) Family Papers consist of correspondence, journals, research notes, and collected materials related to Longfellow and his children’s and siblings’ families. Highlights include contemporary newspaper accounts of Longfellow, letters discussing family members’ activities, and childhood mementos of growing up in Craigie House.
- Cross-references: The museum collections of the Longfellow National Historic Site hold the personal belongings, furnishings, and books related to Henry and his children and, to a lesser extent, his siblings. Their catalog records are available at the site.
- Many archival collections at the Longfellow National Historic Site hold related materials. They include:
- LONG 27886: Longfellow Family Photograph Collection, 1845-1972. This collection holds the bulk of the many images related to these individuals.
- LONG 17314: Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana (1881-1950) Papers, 1744-1971. Dana compiled extensive research on his grandfather and his literary career.

LONG 20257: Frances Elizabeth Appleton Longfellow (1817-1861) Papers, 1825-1961.
The wife of Longfellow and mother of his children wrote of their family life extensively in her journals.

Various numbers: Longfellow Family Art Collection.
Drawings by Henry and his children reside in this collection.

LONG 27923: Wadsworth-Longfellow Family Papers, 1610-1971.
These papers hold the letters of HWL's parents, Stephen (1776-1849) and Zilpah Wadsworth Longfellow (1778-1851), which contain many references to their children and grandchildren. Correspondence to the children is included. Extensive genealogical background material on the Wadsworth and Longfellow families is also present.

LONG 28555: Alexander Wadsworth Longfellow (1814-1901) Family Papers, 1730-1950.
Alexander's correspondence to Mary and James Greenleaf makes many references to family members including his brother Stephen and his children.

LONG 33705: The Reverend Samuel Longfellow (1819-1892) Papers, 1792-1963.
Samuel's correspondence while he resided in Cambridge gives details of his brother Henry's and sister Mary's households.

Many outside collections contain letters and memorabilia related to Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and to a lesser extent to his family members. They include:

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Collection, Special Collections, Bowdoin College, Library Call No. M112.

Mary Longfellow Greenleaf Ledger Book (1 volume), Williams Research Center, Tulane University.

Greenleaf and Hubbard Business Records, 1850-

1860, Baker Library Historical Collection, Harvard Business School. Mss. 761. These are the papers related to James Greenleaf's business as a cotton merchant in New Orleans.

The most significant holdings are in Houghton Library, Harvard University.⁴ They include:

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Papers, Call No. Ms Am 1340. This is the bulk of journals, letters, and manuscripts.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Miscellaneous Papers, Call No. Ms Am 1370.

Harriet Spelman Longfellow Sketchbooks, Call no. bMs Am 1340.11.

SERIES DESCRIPTIONS

The Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Family Papers are divided into eighteen series. The first twelve series are based on the personal papers of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, two of his six children, five of his six siblings, and their immediate families. As Henry Wadsworth Longfellow is the central figure in this collection, the series begin with his papers followed by those of his children. The last seven series are the materials removed from the collection because of their format and/or fragile nature. Separation sheets are inserted in the spot from which an item was removed, and copies of the separation sheets are stored with the removed item itself.

Within the first eleven series, sub-series represent the individual family members. The sub-series are divided into these categories when appropriate:⁶

Diaries and Journals

Generally daily records made by the individuals. Arranged chronologically.

Correspondence – Outgoing

Letters by the individual are arranged chronologically.⁷ In certain cases when letters are found closely associated with other documents such as legal and estate materials, the letters are left in those sections and cross-references are made with the appropriate correspondence section.

The researcher should consult the correspondence sections of fellow family members when studying an individual because most family members wrote and received letters from one another.

Correspondence – Incoming

Letters to the individuals are arranged alphabetically by correspondent's surname and chronologically therein.

Manuscripts

Generally an original writing by the individual such as a poem and research notes. Arranged chronologically.

Personal Materials

⁶ In the case of the Henry Wadsworth Longfellow papers, the sections "Writings by HWL," "Writings Related to HWL Works," "Literary Career," "Academic Career," and "Obituaries and Commemorations" are added.

⁷ In the case of Edith Longfellow Dana, the letters are grouped by recipient and by date within those groups.

A broad category that includes the individual's obituaries and hair specimens. Arranged chronologically when possible.

Professional Life

Documents related to the individual's career outside the home. Arranged chronologically.

Financial Records

Account books, receipts, and invoices appear in these categories. Arranged chronologically.

Legal Records

Includes deeds, marriages, and other personal legal materials. Arranged chronologically.

Estate Documents

Includes wills and probate records. Obituaries are placed in the "Personal Materials" category above. Arranged chronologically.

Images

Pictures of persons and places. Arranged chronologically.

Genealogical Materials

Lists of family members' birth and death dates are in this collection. Arranged chronologically.

Collected Materials

Items other than correspondence such as books, invitations, dried flowers, and calling cards owned by the individual. Arranged chronologically.

Research Materials

Biographical material such as news articles and research notes. Arranged chronologically.

Unassociated Materials

These items cannot at this time be related to a specific individual.

Series and Sub-Series Descriptions of Family Members' Papers*I. HWL Papers, 1815-1969*

Because the Longfellow House Trust deposited most of Longfellow's journals, letters, and manuscripts in the Houghton Library in 1954 (the loan became a sale in 1976), a relatively small amount of material remains in the LONG archives. A list of the correspondence to and from Longfellow is given in Appendix B. Family correspondents include his brother Alexander, his father Stephen, his nephew Stephen, and his children.

Several groups of items relate to his literary works including his notebooks for Poems of Places, plays based on his works, and the copyrights for many of his books. A paraphrase of "The Courtship of Miles Standish" is one example of the imitations and parodies of his famous poems. A group of Brooklyn school children compiled their favorite excerpts into a booklet given to Longfellow.⁸

Two sets of lined index cards make up the "Catalog Card" sub-series in the Addendum. A label indicates Longfellow had catalog cards made up for the books in his library room. Longfellow and possibly family members generated index cards indicating the place name, poet, and name of poem while he was editing his multi-volume Poems of Places.

Longfellow, his family, and unidentified persons collected the extensive amount of newspaper articles about his publication of The Divine Comedy in 1867, his celebrated visit to England in 1868, and his birthday celebrations. Longfellow placed the date of publication on many of these clippings but did not annotate them otherwise. The many lengthy obituaries show the extent of his fame and popularity.

Longfellow's admirers, inspired by his works, sent him surprising gifts. Elizabeth Lawrence gave him a fragment of the casket holding Dante's remains.⁹ The Reverend Daniel Macgowan in his correspondence enclosed Chinese newspapers. Mary Brewster enclosed carefully mounted, exquisite specimens of seaweed to the author of the poem "Seaweed."

Only a small amount of documents, mostly research material, is related to Mary Storer Potter Longfellow.

II. Ernest Wadsworth Longfellow (1845-1921) and Family Papers, 1850-1937

⁸ See "Quotations from the Poems of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, Recited by Pupils of Public School No. 9 Brooklyn, N.Y.," October 1880, Box 51, Folder 1.

⁹ See her correspondence re: this gift in Box 1, Folder 35.

A few childhood penmanship books and letters are included (two letters to his sister Alice give insight into housekeeping at the Craigie House while she and Anne Allegra were studying at Newnham College).¹⁰ Only an undated sales catalog and a Boston MFA gift acknowledgment of the currently highly admired Isabella and the Pot of Basil indicate his extensive artistic career. The materials related to Harriet Spelman Longfellow, his wife, do not reveal her artistic talents.

III. Edith Longfellow Dana (1853-1915) Papers, 1857-1949

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana retrieved a large amount of his mother's correspondence, which forms the bulk of her papers. Recipients of her letters include her sister Alice, brother Charles, cousin Mary King Longfellow, her sister-in-law "Lily" Dana, and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana himself. They provide a wealth of biographical detail about her life and also talk about other family members. For example, she describes in detail the fiftieth birthday party given by Alice at the Craigie House for Anne Allegra in a letter to her daughter Frances; pansies to honor "Pansy" decorated the table.¹¹

The young Edith "edited" a homemade juvenile magazine, The Secret (May 1865-1866). She, Anne Allegra, Alexander Wadsworth Longfellow Jr., and their friends contributed articles. Edith's mother evidently enjoyed collecting samples of her golden locks as several have been preserved.

Her son Henry compiled many documents concerning her final illness and death, taking many from his father's legal files. Her family desperately wrote to out-of-town specialists and clipped articles describing cancer cures. Obituaries are also included.

IV. Anne Allegra Longfellow Thorp (1855-1934) and Family Papers, 1861-1972

The one journal of Anne Allegra describes in short entries her family's trip to Europe in 1868-1869. It is most memorable for the flowers and leaves she pressed in its pages as mementoes. The amount of outgoing correspondence is small but gives details of her travels and courtship with Joseph Gilbert Thorp Jr. One mentions "those Corean [sic] photos which you [brother Charles] sent home."¹²

The letters from her sister Edith span the years from 1873 to 1913.¹³ They reveal much in the lives of the two young women at home in Craigie House and on their trips away from the family. Edith writes of attending the memorial service for Charles Sumner and hearing Carl Schurz's "splendid" eulogy.¹⁴ She records her reactions to the Asian objects Charles sent home and her father's response to a legacy from Sumner:

¹⁰ Box 6, Folder 47.

¹³ These letters belong to Accession LONG-104. They came into the LONG Archives recently and so were not incorporated by HWLD into ELD outgoing correspondence.

*Papa has been unpacking Charlie's china today. It is all lovely, but a good deal of it is smashed. I am more interested in Mr. Sumner's beautiful things. He left Papa a splendid marble copy of the Psyche in Naples with her head sliced off. Unfortunately Papa does not like it.*¹⁵

The papers of Anne Allegra's husband contain a letterbook with copies of his personal business letters between 1916 and 1921. They reflect his duties as an executor of his sister Sara Bull's estate as he sent money to support an Indian school for women and acted on behalf of the Ole Bull Fund Committee trust.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana collected much of the material relating to the Thorp daughters through a newspaper clipping service subscription. The original letters of Erica Thorp de Berry written while she served as a teacher to wartime orphan boys during World War I convey vividly one volunteer's efforts to aid France in its rebuilding. Her parents thought the letters so important that they had them transcribed. Anne Longfellow Thorp and Priscilla Thorp Smith kept the correspondence and legal documents generated in the process of transferring the Longfellow House to the National Park Service. They also collected newspaper clippings about public events held at the Craigie House including the one hundred fiftieth anniversary of their grandfather's birth in 1957 that featured a live TV broadcast from the House.

V. Stephen Longfellow (1805-1850) and Family Papers, 1825-1947

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana gathered most of the materials of this small series in his research. For example, a twentieth-century photostat of a newspaper recounts the Stephen Longfellow (1834-1905) bigamy scandal. Dana's genealogical notes are also included.

VI. Elizabeth Longfellow (1808-1829) Papers, 1815-1828

This small amount of correspondence includes letters to her father Stephen (1776-1849), her mother Zilpah, and her sister Anne.

This series is extremely rich, containing valuable information about Anne and many of her family members. The majority of the documents in this series are original, although there are a few copies made by Anne of information that she found important. Many also show evidence of Anne's distinctive love of purple ink and pencil for writing.

Anne's journals include one written in 1858 in which she describes a visit to New York by steamer she took from Cambridge, MA. Also included in this series are nine journals kept by Anne from July 24, 1868 to August 17, 1869 documenting her trip abroad with her family to England, Scotland, France and Italy. These journals are full of information on the places she visited, the people she saw, and travel conditions and arguably are the best documentation in the Longfellow archives of this familial expedition. There is also a set of three journals in a presentation box containing transcriptions of poems, hymns, prayers and excerpts from sermons and lectures that Anne found especially meaningful and Anne's handwritten copy of a tribute to her late husband, George Washington Pierce. Also included are pressed flowers from the graves of her husband, her mother, and her dear friend Harriet.

There is extensive correspondence between Anne, her family and friends in which she talks about her life in Portland from the time she was a young girl of ten until her death at 91. Anne's letters to the members of her family contain comments about the weather, walks she took, visitors to the house, and information about other family members. Many of Anne's letters appear to have been written in a way designed to conserve the number of pages. The letters were first written horizontally and then vertically on the same page producing a cross-hatch effect which makes difficult reading. Anne's correspondents include her sister Mary Longfellow Greenleaf and her brothers Alexander Wadsworth Longfellow (1814-1901) and Samuel Longfellow (1819-1892). There is also correspondence between Anne and her mother Zilpah Wadsworth Longfellow, her father Stephen Longfellow (1776-1849), her Aunt Lucia Wadsworth (1783-1864), and her uncle Alexander Scammel Wadsworth (1790-1851). In addition there is correspondence to her sisters-in-law Elizabeth Clapp Porter Longfellow (1822-1904) and "Fanny" Frances Elizabeth Appleton Longfellow (1817-1861), her aunt Sophia Storer Longfellow Redington (1795-1874), and her cousin Anne Sophia Longfellow Balkam (b. 1818).

There are also a smaller amount of letters from other members of her family, including her sister Mary's husband James Greenleaf (1814-1865), Anne's sister-in-law Hannah Pierce, her brother Alexander's children — "Bess" [Elizabeth Porter Longfellow (1856-1891)], "Wad" [Alexander Wadsworth Longfellow (1854-1934)], "Mamie" [Mary King Longfellow (1852-1945)] and Lucia Wadsworth Longfellow (1859-1940) — and Henry's daughter-in-law, Harriet Spelman Longfellow (1848-1937). There is also extensive correspondence between Anne and her "Dear Friend" Elizabeth Orr Poor (d. 1844) in which Anne was much more open with her thoughts as can only be accomplished when writing to a dear friend.

The estate documents contain, in addition to copies of Anne's will and copy of an assignment of burial plot in Evergreen Cemetery, correspondence with the Maine Historical Society regarding Anne's decision to donate the Wadsworth-Longfellow

House to the society in memory of her brother Henry. There are also handwritten notes indicating Anne's wishes for the disposition of her property upon her death.

VIII. Mary Longfellow Greenleaf (1816-1902) and Family Papers, 1824-1946

The papers of Mary Longfellow Greenleaf comprise the bulk of this series. She dutifully recorded daily events briefly in her journals. These diaries were shared with her husband James who wrote the entries during their yearly stressful journeys by land and boat to and from New Orleans and Cambridge. He also wrote tersely about the events of June 1858 when the Vigilance Committee took over New Orleans. Her letters, mostly written to her family in Portland and brother Samuel at Harvard University, give more insights into her opinions and relationships: her sister-in-law Marianne Preble is characterized as vain and “wearing no less than twenty-one rings.”¹⁶ Her descriptions of another sister-in-law, Fanny Appleton, are more favorable, conjuring her charm:

*I have seen her twice and am entirely fascinated and in love with her. ... She is very beautiful, tho she will not strike you so at first sight – her eyes are unlike any in the known world, and her smile so sweet and loving – then she seems so full of heart and soul, and is affectionate & cordial in her manner...*¹⁷

The family correspondence also vividly portrays her visits to her brother Henry in Cambridge. The diaries and letters drop off precipitously after 1865, the year of James's death, perhaps indicating her anguish.

Most of James' papers are his letters to Alexander Wadsworth Longfellow Sr., his childhood friend and Mary's brother. They speak of his boarding school and college day activities and his later life in New Orleans. The architect who built the couple's new home at 76 Brattle Street, that became the Radcliffe President's House sent drawings of the interiors. There are a few items related to his father and mother, Simon and Hannah Greenleaf.

The estate papers involve the estates of James, Mary, and the trust formed from his real estate assets, the Greenleaf Land Trust. James left his large fortune of stocks and real estate to Mary for her use during her lifetime and to their other family members after her death. After her death in 1902, his estate was finally settled, and Mary's own moneys were distributed to family members and charities as her separate will requested. The estate's executor, Richard Henry Dana III, advised that a trust be set up to develop and sell off the considerable Cambridge, Massachusetts real estate. The papers of this Greenleaf Land Trust, active from 1905-1910, show the sale of the Greenleaf Mansion at 76 Brattle and surrounding block to Radcliffe College. Dana's own case files comprise the bulk of estate papers, and some documents have his file codes. He is known to have kept the Greenleaf Land Trust files separate from the other estate papers.¹⁸

¹⁶ MLG to ALP, September 1831, Box 29, Folder 6.

¹⁷ MLG to ALP, 10 July 1843, Box 30, Folder 6.

The papers of the Greenleaf Family, the last of the sub-series, hold items related to other Greenleaf family members. The Reverend Patrick Henry Greenleaf, who became a minister in Brooklyn, New York, is presumed to have made up humorous booklets mocking his ascent in the church. Family historian Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana developed a lecture and unpublished article about Mary, James, and 76 Brattle Street in which he relied on the letters and journals in these papers.

IX. Ellen Longfellow (1818-1834) Papers, 1830-1834

A small amount of correspondence holds letters to her sisters Anne and Mary and to her brother Alexander. One letter is from her cousin Anne Sophia Longfellow Balkam.

X. Anne Sophia Longfellow Balkam (b. 1818), 1830-1851

Some materials relate to her guardianship. One letter to Mary Longfellow Greenleaf recounts Zilpah Wadsworth Longfellow's death.¹⁹

XI. Papers Related to Multiple Family Members, 1815-1912

This series holds materials related to more than one Henry Wadsworth Longfellow child or sibling.

XII. Unassociated Materials, 1817

A few materials were found in these papers that could not be associated with an individual.

¹⁸ See 1930 document re: RHD III system in Box 38, Folder 11. Two folders most likely belonging to AWL Sr. and his family are in this series also.

¹⁹ She also wrote a letter to Stephen Longfellow (1776-1849).

PART II:

BIOGRAPHICAL DATA

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (22 February 1807- 24 March 1882)

*“Every farmer’s wife has a LONGFELLOW, if she has only a dozen books in her case.”*²⁰

An American newspaper in 1868 thus characterized the popularity of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow’s poetry and added, “No living English poet has half the circle of readers in England.” By that time, he had become a cultural icon in America and author of worldwide renown. His works were acknowledged standards of his nation’s classrooms and so well known that they inspired imitations and outright parodies. Born in Maine and a longtime Cambridge, Massachusetts resident, he was the first financially successful poet in the United States.

Longfellow grew up in a household that valued education and literature. His father, Stephen Longfellow (1776-1849), was a Portland, Maine lawyer who was a trustee of Bowdoin College. His mother, Zilpah Wadsworth Longfellow (1778-1851), enjoyed reading poetry and fiction; her father, General Peleg Wadsworth (1748-1829) was a schoolteacher before his military career. After Henry was born on 27 February 1807 in a house on Fore Street in Portland, the family moved back to the large brick house on Congress Street built by General Wadsworth. Here Stephen and Zilpah raised their eight children, aided by Zilpah’s sister Lucia Wadsworth. Longfellow and his older brother Stephen attended Portland Academy before they entered Bowdoin College in 1821.²¹

Henry proved a diligent student and joined a literary club at Bowdoin. He earlier showed an interest in poetry when at age thirteen he composed “The Battle at Lovell’s Pond,” perhaps inspired by listening to his grandfather’s tales of pre-Revolutionary War days. After graduation from Bowdoin in 1825, he briefly studied law in his father’s chambers. He soon was offered a professorship in the new modern languages department at Bowdoin, perhaps through the influence of his father. In order to prepare himself for his new duties, he journeyed in Europe from April 1826 to August 1829 to study languages in Spain, France, Italy, and Göttingen, Germany.²² This trip furthered Longfellow’s lifelong interest and facility in a wide range of foreign languages.

He began teaching at Bowdoin upon his return and published works on the French and Spanish languages. He also courted and wed a friend of his sisters, Mary Storer Potter of Portland, on 14 September 1831. His Outre-Mer (1833-1834), literary sketches inspired by his European travels, began his reputation as a writer outside of academic literature. The couple had tired of the small town of Brunswick and of Bowdoin and so eagerly accepted the offer of a teaching position at Harvard University. They traveled to Europe in 1834 where Henry explored Scandinavia and its languages. While in Holland, Mary died from complications of a miscarriage in 1835.

The new widower assumed his position at Harvard and took lodgings at the Craigie House on Brattle Street in 1837. He renewed his acquaintanceship with the personable and highly intelligent young woman he and met at Interlaken, Switzerland, Frances (“Fanny”) Elizabeth Appleton, but his courtship met with little success. His literary popularity grew with the publication of his poems Voices of the Night and of Hyperion, a Romance (the latter inspired by his relationship with Fanny) in 1839, Ballads and Other Poems in 1841, and Poems on Slavery in 1842. Fatigued and perhaps heartsore, he traveled for a third time to Europe in 1842.

Fanny Appleton, unexpectedly to Henry, accepted his suit in May 1843 and the couple was married that July. It was the beginning of a tranquil family life in Craigie House where the couple had six children, five of whom lived to adulthood. In the midst of his burgeoning family and Harvard teaching duties, he continued to write poems such as Evangeline (1847). Due to the financial success of his many books, he could afford to abandon his professorship and devote himself full-time to writing literature in 1854. The first fruit of his new commitment was Hiawatha published in 1855, followed by The Courtship of Miles Standish in 1858.

The July 1861 death of Fanny Longfellow from burns incurred when her dress caught fire ended their life together. Longfellow, also severely burned from attempting to save her, became the single father of two teenage boys and three young girls. He delved into the monumental task of translating Dante’s Divine Comedy in 1862 as it diverted his mind from his loss. In 1865 he formed the Dante Club, a group of Boston literary and academic figures who critiqued his translations and were rewarded with supper at Craigie House. The work was published in 1867.

His fourth trip to Europe was inspired by his familial love. His sisters, Anne Longfellow Pierce and Mary Longfellow Greenleaf, as well as his children had never experienced Europe. This extended family, including his brother the Reverend Samuel Longfellow (1819-1892), accompanied newlyweds Ernest and Harriet Spelman Longfellow in May 1868. They visited England, where Oxford and Cambridge conferred doctorates upon him, France, Switzerland, Germany, and Italy.

Upon their return in September 1869, Longfellow resumed his writing. The sale of his poem “The Hanging of the Crane” for $3000, the largest sum paid for a poem until that time, was one career highlight. He also wrote the epic Christus: A Mystery (1872) and Michael Angelo published after his death. His seventy-fifth birthday in 1882 inspired public tributes worldwide and in the city of his birth, Portland. After spells of illness, he died of peritonitis March 24 of that year.

Mary Storer Potter Longfellow (1812-1835)

Comparatively little is known about Longfellow's first wife. Longfellow himself burned her journals after her untimely death. She was the daughter of Judge Barrett Potter who was a family friend to the Longfellows. Her letters to her sister-in-law Mary Longfellow Greenleaf reveal a lively, sociable woman who was affectionate to her husband's family. Her reactions to the European countries to which she traveled with her husband were mixed. She disliked Sweden and its "industrious fleas," but loved England: "I think I never shall see another country to compare with England."²³

Ernest Wadsworth Longfellow (1845-1921)

Born on 23 November 1845, Ernest was the second child, "a nice little 'round-head,' with large eyes and fair skin" according to his father. As a boy, he was quieter than his boisterous older brother Charles Appleton ("Charley"), "Ernest the Gentle" vis-à-vis "Charles the Bold." Both boys had their initial schooling at Miss Jennison's at the corner of Garden and Mason Streets. Childhood drawings, including several of Craigie House, reveal a budding interest in art.²⁴

By 1863 he took "no interest in anything but Mathematics and Engineering" and so desired an appointment to West Point. As it did not come for four months, he began to attend the Lawrence Scientific School. He decided against attending West Point as his father pointed out it was foolish to "give up eight years" if not committed to an engineering or military career.²⁵

He decided to embark on a painting career. He studied art in Paris while on a European trip with his uncle Samuel in 1865 to 1866. He traveled also to Switzerland and Italy with letters from his father referring to the open air and change of scenery improving his headaches.

Upon his return, he became engaged to the attractive childhood friend of his sister Alice, Harriet ("Hattie") Spelman on 10 March 1867. They were accompanied by his family on their European honeymoon begun after their 21 May 1868 wedding. He and Hattie continued to take trips with his sister Alice. They moved from Craigie House into their newly built home across the street at 108 Brattle Street in 1871. Ernest studied with the famous French artist Thomas Couture in the summers of 1876 and 1877.²⁶

Ernest specialized in landscapes of scenery he encountered on his trips to Italy, Egypt, and Japan as well as places close to his second home "Edgecliff" on Coolidge Point in Manchester, Massachusetts. His major figural work is an allegorical piece Sacred and Profane Love. He eventually sold 108 Brattle and lived at hotels in New York City and Boston. He also collected other painters' works and in several cases donated them to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts (MFA).

His will benefited the Museum in two ways: the proceeds of the sale of his own paintings went to the MFA School and an endowment fund for acquisitions was a major legatee of his estate. Most money went into a trust for his wife and was divided between the Museum and his nieces and nephews. He openly disinherited his two nephews Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana and his brother Allston for their "socialist and pacifist" views expressed during World War I. He is buried at Mount Auburn Cemetery.

Harriet Spelman Longfellow (1848-1937)

A close friend of Alice Longfellow, she must have known her future husband Ernest early in life. She, like Ernest, was a talented artist. Family letters indicated psychological problems, perhaps depression, troubled her by the 1880s, prompting visits to sanatoriums in the country.²⁷ She outlived her husband by many years, dying in 1937.

1905 Trip to Italy.
1915 Died 21 July in Manchester after bout with intestinal cancer.

The “golden-haired” Edith thus immortalized in her father’s poem “The Children’s Hour” was the middle daughter of the family. She shared her childhood lessons with her sisters Alice and Anne Allegra under Hannah Davie after their mother’s death in 1861. After the family’s European sojourn she studied outside the home until 1872. She assumed Alice’s housekeeping duties in 1872 when Alice was traveling in Europe.

She and her father enjoyed a close relationship. Their affection is portrayed in the G.P.A. Healy’s joint portrait paintings, The Arch of Titus and HWL and His Daughter Edith, executed in Rome in 1869. They attended art and science lectures together before her marriage to Richard Henry Dana III, a neighborhood friend whose summer home in Manchester she first visited in 1867. Her father mourned her absence from Craigie House – “Weddings leave vacant chairs as well as funerals; and she is lost to me.”²⁸ She, however, returned to her paternal home where she gave birth to Henry’s first grandchild in 1879.

She and Richard built their primary home next door to the Craigie House at 113 Brattle Street. They also built a summer home in Manchester on Dana Beach. She remained in close contact with her sisters Alice and Anne Allegra, who served as her neighbors, and with her sister-in-law Elizabeth (“Lily”) Ellery Dana throughout her life. She, like them, participated in events honoring their father such as the 1914 dedication of Longfellow Park opposite Craigie House.

She regarded the raising of her six children – Richard IV, Henry (“Harry”), Frances Appleton, Allston, Edmund (“Ned”) Trowbridge, and Delia – as a primary goal in her life. She, however, participated in civic activities, namely the Cambridge Historical Society, the Humane Society, and the Holy Ghost Hospital for Incurables. Inspired by her husband, she joined the Woman’s Auxiliary to the Civil Service Reform Society.²⁹

Her husband and family searched in vain for a cure for the cancerous tumor that eventually killed her. She died July 21, 1915 at home in Manchester. The summer was a cruel one for the family because her daughter-in-law, Jessie Holliday Dana committed suicide 17 June of that year. Only three years before, Jessie had married Ned in the Craigie House garden in a wedding publicized for its avant-garde nature.

- 1905 Involved in train accident while visiting the Hampton Institute.
- 1931 Joseph Gilbert Thorp died 5 May.
- 1934 Died 28 February.

Anne Allegra, the last child of Henry and Fanny, was born November 8, 1855. Although her parents delighted in her and Fanny’s good health, the baby was unnamed for over a month.³⁰ The final choice combined the name of Henry’s sister Anne Longfellow Pierce with the Italian word for “happy.” Her girlhood nickname of “Pansy” would remain with her the rest of her life.

She was under six years of age when her mother died. Hannah Davie, the governess who took over the care of the family’s younger children in 1862, taught her as well as her sister Edith. Her father as a single parent took special care of the girls, and they grew exceptionally close to him: when faced with his departure to Niagara Falls in May of 1862, Anne “cries about it, and clings round my neck and begs me not to go so pathetically, that if I could I would give up the journey and stay quietly at home.”³¹ As in the case of her sister Edith, she probably took classes outside the home as a teenager.

She and her sister Alice attended the Harvard Annex in 1879, the first year in its existence. Anne became her father’s amanuensis during his periods of poor health until his death on March 24, 1882. In 1882 she oversaw publication of poems about horses she had compiled, In the Saddle. She and Alice undertook another educational adventure by studying at Newnham College at Cambridge, England from 1883 to 1884.

In the summer of 1884 she traveled to Norway with Alice and her suitor Joseph Gilbert Thorp Jr. As early as 1882, he was calling upon her, once attempting to wait out another gentleman.³² For Christmas 1883 he sent her a gift. They became engaged during a trip to Norway including a visit to his sister’s home in Lysøen. After their 1885 marriage performed by the Reverend Samuel Longfellow with a reception hosted by her sister Alice at Craigie House, they built a home, 115 Brattle Street, two houses down from the Craigie House and next door to her sister Edith at 113 Brattle.

The couple raised five daughters in this home. Summers were spent at “Ravensthorp,” their home on an island off Mount Desert Island in Maine. Anne Allegra maintained a strong interest in the Craigie House and helped entertain at public events there.³³ She was deeply interested in education for the underprivileged and traveled to the Southern Educational Conferences in 1903 to 1905 with visits to African-American schools. In addition, she and her husband “always headed every list of those to be ‘counted on’ in any movement” for the public good in Cambridge.³⁴

She cared for her husband Joseph in the last years of his life. An acquaintance remembers her in her last illness: “Lying in bed she still had that look of distinction, and she was so alert, filled with interest in all that concerned the world of which she was still an active member.” She died on 28 February 1934.

Joseph Gilbert Thorp Jr. (1851-1931)

He was born at Oxford, New York, on August 17, 1852, the son of Joseph Gilbert Sr. and Amelia Chapman Thorp. His family moved to Eau Claire, Wisconsin where his father became a wealthy lumber “baron” and state senator. Thorp Jr. received his undergraduate degree from Harvard in 1879 before proceeding to a law degree there. Meanwhile he and his parents lived in the James Russell Lowell house “Elmwood” in Cambridge.

After a stint at the Boston firm Shattuck & Munroe, he was admitted to the Suffolk Bar in 1883. He later formed his own law firm. Thorp also served as a president of a coal company and was on the board of a lumber company.

During his law school days, he courted Anne Allegra Longfellow (see above) and became engaged to her in the summer of 1884. During their married life, they spent the school year in Cambridge with their five daughters and the summers at Ravensthorp. He and Anne Allegra allegedly never missed a Harvard baseball game.³⁵ Thorp was an avid golfer and was runner-up in the national amateur championship in 1896 and a finalist in the Massachusetts amateur in 1909.

Photography was another avocation he pursued passionately. A member of the Old Cambridge Photographic Club, he particularly enjoyed posing his young daughters in interiors and organizing these family photos into albums. He also took photographs outdoors including the 1900 Hiawatha reenactment.³⁶

His civic activities were numerous. Temperance reform, including a Cambridge Coffee-House Association “providing saloons without liquor,” was a long-term interest. Like his brother-in-law Richard Henry Dana III, he participated vigorously in Civil Service Reform; he also was involved in the Massachusetts Prison Association, which strove to better prepare inmates for re-entry into public life.

He suffered poor health in the last years of his life, regretfully giving up his golf game. He died at 115 Brattle Street in the morning of May 5, 1931.

Sara Chapman Thorp Bull (1850-1911)

Joseph Thorp Jr.’s elder sister married the famous Norwegian violinist Ole Bull (1810-1880) in 1870. Their only child Sara, known mostly by her middle name Olea, was born a year later. Sara’s parents, Joseph and Amelia, traveled with the Bulls in the early years of their marriage.

After Bull’s death, Sara lived at 168 Brattle Street where she wrote a biography of her late husband and initiated her popular “Cambridge Conferences,” lectures on religion and ethics.³⁷ She championed the Hindu Swami Vivekananda and his form of yoga, “Vedanta,” and introduced his colleague, Swami Saradananda, to Joseph and Anne Allegra.³⁸ Her daughter Olea Bull Vaughan disputed her will on the basis of the Swami holding undue influence over her.

The Bulls summered at their home on the isle of Lysøen near Bergen, Norway. After Olea Vaughan's death in 1911, her daughter Sylvia Bull Curtis continued to visit. In 1973 she donated the estate to the Society for the Preservation of Norwegian Ancient Monuments.

Alice Allegra Thorp (28 January 1888-1951)

Alice Thorp continued to live in the family home at 115 Brattle Street after her parents' death. She kept in touch with Craigie House activities as a near neighbor and acted as an agent for the Longfellow House Trust with her sister Anne Longfellow Thorp. The House's custodians, Thomas de Valcourt and Frank Buda, sent a wreath to her funeral in 1951.

Amelia Thorp Knowles (11 August 1889-14 April 1979) and Family

Amelia married Robert Winthrop Knowles (Harvard Class of 1912) October 25, 1913. He became a highly successful investment banker who died at the age of 45 in 1936. They lived in the Boston area, first at 5 Longfellow Park and then at 189 Marlboro Street. Their summer estate was the Towers in Beverly, Massachusetts. Amelia was at one time president of the Vincent Club. She died April 14, 1979.

They raised four children: Robert Jr. (1914-2003), Anne Longfellow Knowles Dickinson (b. 1919), Joseph Gilbert Thorp Knowles (1920-1987), and Helen Knowles Williams Glancy (b. 1922). Robert Jr. was a highly ranked amateur golfer who was invited to play in the Masters Tournament in 1951 and 1952. He married Barbara Rutherford in 1946 and settled in Aiken, South Carolina. They had two daughters Lucy and Alice.³⁹ Anne attended Radcliffe College before her 1945 marriage to then Navy Lt. William Reynolds Dickinson Jr. They had three children, Amy Thorp (b. 1946), Anna Wilson (b. 1948), and William Reynolds III (b. 1951). Helen Appleton Knowles married Richard Cary Williams in 1942; their children were Richard Cary Jr. (b. 1942) and Elinor Wilson Williams (b. 1946).

Erica Thorp de Berry (14 December 1890-5 February 1943)

Erica, known as "Bunny" throughout her life, was the first Thorp daughter to attend college, in her case, Radcliffe College, with which her mother and Aunt Alice were closely associated. She majored in philosophy and had at least one course with the renowned philosopher Josiah Royce. After graduation in 1910, she traveled to Europe in 1911 to accompany her aunt Alice. Alice and she appear to have been particularly close, with Alice reading Erica's course notes and travel journals.

Erica shared her parents' and aunts' interest in education, particularly for the underprivileged. After an intense study of Italian, she studied the methods of Madame Maria Montessori in the late spring and early summer of 1914. She and her aunt Alice were forced to evacuate Paris in the face of impending war that July, gradually making their way to England. Erica taught in the settlement school for immigrant children in Cambridge, Massachusetts in 1914 (possibly established by her mother); it incorporated the Montessori methods for teaching and training young children. She taught underprivileged boys in a settlement school in Appalachia from fall 1916 to spring 1917.

This ardent and idealistic young woman understandably wished to participate in the relief effort associated with the war. By 13 September 1917 she was in Paris and soon joined with the "Committee Franco-American for the Protection of the Children of the Frontier" which took care of young children separated from their families. She also volunteered serving meals at YMCA Hotel in Paris to servicemen. Erica worked with two such "colonies" of children near Paris until the bombing in early 1918 forced their evacuation to Lacaune in rural south France. Erica and the staff of French religious workers and American volunteers lived and taught the young boys who numbered some 100. The "Colony" ambitiously planned for the boys' and the countryside's future by attempting apprentice programs in shoemaking and carpentry and by growing its own food. Erica, in lieu of senior staff, at times was responsible for administering the entire colony.

Upon her return, she and her sister Priscilla accompanied their father on a trip out West. She visited Norway in 1922. While working at the James Baker Foundation, she met her future husband, psychologist Ellett de Berry. After their 1927 marriage at Northeast Harbor using the same marriage service as her parents, they moved to Minneapolis and then to Texas. They had four children: Anne, Alice, Joseph Gilbert Thorp, and Guy. She died of cancer in 1943, the first of the Thorp daughters to die.

Anne Longfellow Thorp (9 April 1891-26 April 1977)

Known as a young girl as "Tukey" or "Tuke" by her family, she participated as a dancing goddess at the Craigie House fetes as a young girl. Anne chose to go to Vassar College instead of Radcliffe where her mother and Erica had studied. Perhaps inspired by her sister Erica, she and a close friend spent a year working at an orphanage for children of war in Normandy in 1920-1921. Persuaded by her mentor at Vassar, Katharine Taylor, she became a history instructor at Cambridge's Shady Hill School. Here she taught the future poet and memoirist May Sarton who would later write a loving homage to her in the form of a novel, The Magnificent Spinster. She lived at 115 Brattle Street until around 1935 when she built a home inspired by the colonial style in Sudbury.

She left Shady Hill School in her fifties. She became involved in a second effort to rebuild Europe after a second world war, this time the establishment of a Neighborhood House in devastated Bremen, Germany. Upon her return, she devoted more time to administering the Craigie House and its archives with her cousin Harry. She aided Harry in vetting the Henry Wadsworth Longfellow materials which they permitted Lawrance Thompson to use for his book Young Longfellow. She also participated in the local Cambridge Community Center as a trustee. She sold her Sudbury home and renovated the barn in back of 115 Brattle Street into an apartment for herself and Agnes Swift, a Shady Hill librarian who had taken care of her sister Alice.

Throughout her life, she visited the family's house in Northeast Harbor in the summer. After a slight stroke and weakening heart condition, she died in Cambridge in 1977.

Priscilla Alden Thorp Smith (25 March 1897-1 May 1975)

The youngest Thorp daughter was nicknamed "Sitoo." Named after the ancestor made famous by her grandfather, she represented Priscilla Alden in a 1907 centennial tribute to Longfellow and his poetry at the Sanders Theater in Cambridge. Priscilla married (Arthur) Calvert Smith who became secretary to the Harvard Corporation during World War II. After his untimely death in 1945, she raised their three children – Mary Hunting, Calvert, and Frances Appleton – alone. She and her sister Alice served as the chief representatives of the family during the negotiations in the 1960s for the transfer of Craigie House and its contents to the National Park Service. Priscilla died in 1975.

Stephen Longfellow (14 August 1805-9 September 1850)

The first child of Stephen (1776-1849) and Zilpah Wadsworth Longfellow, Stephen was close to his slightly younger brother Henry through their childhoods. They attended Bowdoin College together, the first year (1821) studying in Portland under Bezaleel Cushman. In the next year they boarded together at the Reverend Titcomb's house in Brunswick, and in October 1823 they moved to rooms on campus. Henry was compelled to tell his parents of his brother's lack of studying but complained that he did not like to act as a spy. In late December 1824 Stephen was suspended for pranks, inattention to college exercises, and introduction of alcohol to his room. He studied with the Reverend Joseph Palmer Fessenden, a temperance supporter in Kennebunkport, for four months and later rejoined his class, graduating in the fall of 1825.

He studied law with his father, but his subsequent legal career was apparently unsuccessful. He had traveled to Europe in 1829 as a secretary to his future father-in-law William Pitt Preble when the latter was appointed Minister Plenipotentiary to the Court of the Hague. He married Marianne Preble in 1830, and they had six children, five of whom lived to adulthood. He was employed as a draughtsman on the Northeast Boundary Survey on the border between Maine and New Brunswick in the 1840s with his younger brother Alexander. His marriage to Marianne deteriorated, perhaps due to his alcoholism and absences from home, and the couple divorced in early 1850. In January 1849 he began an extended stay at Craigie House where he had previously visited for lengthy respites and planned to venture to California to participate in the Gold Rush. Instead, his brother Henry arranged for the “water cure” at Brattleboro for, as he gently told his sister Anne, “ill health and anxiety at length affected his mind to such a degree that his memory quite failed him.” Stephen returned to the Wadsworth-Longfellow House to die from complications related to alcoholism on 9 September 1850.

Marianne Preble Longfellow Fuller (30 July 1812- 14 March 1888)

Born Marianne Preble, her parents were Judge William Pitt Preble and Nancy Gale Tucker Preble. Her first child with Stephen also named Stephen died as a baby in 1833. She traveled to Europe in 1830 with her parents, and her letters express homesickness.⁴⁰ After her marriage to Stephen dissolved, the Longfellow family took charge of her sons, Stephen, Henry, and William. Her daughters Ellen and Marian evidently stayed with her. She married George F. Fuller soon after the divorce and moved to Louisville. She died in 1888.

Stephen Longfellow (23 March 1834- January 1905)

Stephen proved to be the proverbial black sheep throughout his life despite the best efforts of his Longfellow relatives. He tried several lines of work with his family once sponsoring a trip to California during the Gold Rush and his uncle Henry bankrolling his effort to manufacture a nautical compass. As a soldier in the Civil War he was wounded three times but never rose in the ranks past sergeant. He married Anna M. Hallett around 1865. After Steven’s bigamous attempt to marry Anna Hennessy in 1879, Henry arranged for the charges to be dismissed. After his misadventure, Stephen agreed to undergo treatment for alcoholism. In another publicized scandal, he forged checks in Henry’s name. His family finally sent him to Australia.⁴¹ He had two children by his marriage to Anna, Stephen and Mary Greenleaf.

William Pitt Preble Longfellow (25 October 1836 - 3 August 1913)

Nicknamed “Willie,” William attended school in Medford, Massachusetts after his parents’ divorce. He attended Harvard University and frequently visited the family at Craigie House. Upon his graduation in 1855, he returned to his mother’s family in Louisville. In 1857 he enrolled in the Lawrence Scientific School to study architecture.

He began practicing architecture in 1860 and went to Portland for business after the 1866 fire.⁴² William later taught briefly at M.I.T. He gained his greatest distinction in the field as a writer and the first editor of The American Architect and compiler. His background in visual design informed an interest in china painting and etching as well. He served as a member of the Permanent Committee in charge of the School of Drawing and Painting at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. His love of literature and music prompted him to write on those subjects also.⁴³

He remained close to his cousins in Cambridge and to the Longfellow family members in Portland throughout his life. He enjoyed sailing with his cousin Alexander Jr. off the Maine coast in the summers. They also shared an interest in photography.⁴⁴

He married Emily Daniel in 1870. They had no children. He died 3 August 1913 at East Gloucester, Massachusetts.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (5 November 1839- April 1874)

The namesake of his uncle, young Henry or “Hen” had a troubled youth despite the solicitude of his guardian Anne Longfellow Pierce. He was asked to leave Harvard in 1859 and worked as a sailor the following year. He served in the Civil War. Henry suffered from alcoholism as had his father and brother Stephen.⁴⁵ He married Frances Gammon of Portland in 1863 and they had three children, Nellie Preble Longfellow (Burns), Arthur and Louise. He died in April 1874.

Ellen Theodora Longfellow (7 April 1838-1927)

“Nellie,” born 7 April 1838, was a favorite of her Longfellow aunts Anne Pierce and Mary Greenleaf before she moved to Louisville with her mother. She remained unmarried and lived most of her adult life in the Boston area. Mary Greenleaf left an annuity to her in her will.⁴⁶

Marian Adele Longfellow (1 April 1849-23 January 1924)

The youngest child of Stephen and Marianne Longfellow married William Francis Morris in 1876. They had three children, William, Madeline, and Henry. She married Michael Francis O’Donoghue in 1891 and was later divorced, returning her surname to Longfellow.

She was an active writer and lecturer and was a founder of the League of American Pen Women in 1897. She was particularly interested in genealogy and was a leading member of several societies including the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Society of Mayflower Descendants.

⁴⁶ See the account for Ellen Longfellow, MLG Estate Papers, Box 35, Folders 1-4 in which Ellen describes her financial situation.

The sister closest to Henry in age, Elizabeth appears to have grown into an articulate young woman interested in painting. Her letters reveal a lively sense of humor and interest in society. She and the young lawyer William Pitt Fessenden developed an attachment. However, an undefined illness with the symptoms of rheumatism plagued her, and she admitted to “long hours of suffering.”⁴⁷ She died at the age of twenty. Ironically she had been named after her mother’s sister Elizabeth who also died young.

Anne Longfellow Pierce (3 March 1810-25 January 1901)

Anne Longfellow was an accomplished and refined young lady in Portland society. As a young woman she often went to balls and parties and also attended lectures and plays.

Anne lived in her family home her entire life except for the time of her marriage to George Washington Pierce. She married Pierce on November 26, 1832 in the parlor of her father’s home. Anne met this classmate of her brother Henry while he was studying law “in chambers” with Anne’s father. After being married a short three years George contracted typhus and died on November 15, 1835 at age 30, leaving Anne a widow at the age of 25 years. After George’s death, Anne moved back into the family home and along with her Aunt Lucia assisted her mother Zilpah in managing the family home and helping to raise her brothers and sisters.

Although Anne’s siblings married and left home, the house was seldom empty for they often returned with their families. She took care of her brother Stephen’s challenging sons, Stephen and Henry, after his death. Her brother Henry and his family made yearly pilgrimages to Portland, and Anne took an especial interest in his daughters after their mother Fanny’s death. In addition to family members and friends who periodically stayed at the home, there were also visitors from out of town that stayed for a few weeks or the summer.

Although Anne felt the responsibility she had undertaken, she was still able to find time to visit family and friends. It appears from her correspondence that she sometimes accompanied her father Stephen in his travels and she often visited her sister Mary and her brother Henry in their homes in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Anne also traveled by steamer to New York City from Cambridge in 1858 and to Europe visiting England, Scotland, France, Italy, Belgium and Switzerland in 1868 through 1869 with the Longfellow clan.

Living in the family home, Anne as the oldest surviving daughter became the keeper of the family history. She collected, copied and preserved items of interest and at times edited letters, removing those bits of information she felt were inappropriate to pass on. When she passed away, the material that she had accumulated went eventually to her niece Mary King Longfellow (1852-1945).

⁴⁷ Elizabeth Longfellow to Rebecca Griswold, 22 February 1828, Box 23, Folder 34.

Anne had made arrangements with the Maine Historical Society for the donation of the Wadsworth-Longfellow House to the society to take place upon her death. Anne died on 25 January 1901 in the house.

Mary Longfellow Greenleaf (28 June 1816-3 December 1902)

Mary Longfellow was born in the Wadsworth-Longfellow House in Portland, Maine, the sixth child and third daughter of Stephen and Zilpah Longfellow. She not only learned school subjects at the Portland Academy but was taught housekeeping skills at home of which she remained proud all her life. Her father and Simon Greenleaf were two leading Portland lawyers who were close friends so she knew her future husband James Greenleaf as a child.

They married in October 1839 in Portland and moved to Cambridge, Massachusetts where his family now lived. The young couple lived in an ell in the back of the “old” Greenleaf House on Brattle Street. In 1841 they moved to New Orleans due to James’s occupation as a cotton merchant. They returned to Cambridge on a yearly basis for James to arrange shipments to northern textile manufacturers and to escape part of the New Orleans summer. Mary faithfully visited her family home in Portland. In 1858-1859 they renovated and moved the “old” Greenleaf House and built a new home at 76 Brattle Street.

When war broke out in April 1861, the couple was in New Orleans. They managed to reach Boston and stayed at their Cambridge home until the Federal occupation of New Orleans in 1863. It is believed that Mary was anti-slavery but felt compassion for her New Orleans friends, saying they were misled by wicked leaders.

On 22 August 1865, when the couple was at their Cambridge home, James suddenly died. Anne, Mary’s sister, came to mourn with her. Mary, already a devout Episcopalian, devoted herself increasingly to church affairs. She gave the money for the first building of St. James in North Cambridge which her brother-in-law, the Reverend James Crosswell had founded. She proceeded to fund the chapel in the church’s new building and assisted in paying off the mortgage. A generation of children was educated in her Sunday School classes.

She always dressed in a black dress and special widow’s cap. Childless, she was a devoted aunt to the Crosswell children and took a special interest in her motherless nieces at Craigie House. Her grandnephew, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana, fondly remembered “her gentlest of all kisses” and his stay at Greenleaf House before Harvard entrance exams “to find perfect peace.”⁴⁸ In the late 1890s her eyesight began to fail and she became increasingly frail. After her death, two memorial windows were erected at St. James’s to commemorate its leading patroness.

James Greenleaf (1814-1865)

⁴⁸ HWLD, "The Greenleafs," ca. 1948, Box 38, Folder 30.

Born and raised in Portland, Greenleaf attended Bowdoin with his good friend Alexander Wadsworth Longfellow Sr. He finished his education at Dartmouth in 1834. His father Simon and mother Hannah moved to Cambridge when Simon became a law professor at Harvard. For his health, James journeyed to Calcutta, India before he began his career as a cotton merchant in New Orleans. He characterized his wife in a letter announcing their engagement as “the lady of my early choice.” Quiet and strong, he revealed definite political views in his letter to his best friend AWL Sr. Mysterious illnesses had bothered him, but his death on 22 August 1865 was unexpected.

Ellen Longfellow (1818-1834)

The youngest daughter in the family shared her sisters’ interest in friendships, parties, and traveling. Ellen died of typhoid fever. Her brother Stephen named his first daughter after her.

Anne Sophia Longfellow Balkam (b. 1818)

Anne was the only child of Captain Samuel Longfellow (1789-1818), Stephen Longfellow’s (1776-1849) younger brother. She inherited part of the estate of her grandfather Stephen Longfellow (1750-1824).⁴⁹ Because her uncle Stephen was an executor of the estate, they kept in contact. Upon her mother’s marriage to Asa Redington in 1824, Redington became her guardian and handled her affairs with the estate.

Although Anne Sophia (commonly called by her middle name) lived outside of Portland during most of her girlhood, she corresponded with and visited her Portland cousins. She was a bridesmaid at Mary Greenleaf’s wedding in 1839. She married a Presbyterian minister Uriah Balkam. She became such a devout follower that a humorous anecdote was told about her when asked if she believed all non-Presbyterians were going to burn in hell: “No! I have always believed that everyone with the name of Longfellow will escape perdition.”⁵⁰
