

Teaching with Primary Sources Workshop

The World War II Incarceration of Japanese Americans

Saturday, November 23, 2013

9:00 am - 4:30 pm

Join fellow educators and Densho at Manzanar National Historic Site to learn how to access and use primary source materials to develop analysis and reasoning skills. This workshop is designed around thinking routines that are easy and powerful to use with a variety of materials in your classroom. Content about the World War II incarceration of Japanese Americans will introduce the thinking routines with photographs, oral histories, documents, and newspaper articles. Additional historical content and context will be provided with each learning activity. This workshop is for qualified educators and pre-service teachers only.

- Workshop participants will receive a CD including lesson ideas aligned to Common Core standards, primary source materials, tips, and tools.
- $100 stipend for teachers who complete the workshop, create a simple lesson plan, and complete a post-workshop survey.
- Includes lunch and a ranger guided tour of Manzanar National Historic Site.

Workshop Facilitators

Tom Ikeda is Densho's founding Executive Director. He has conducted over 200 oral history interviews with Japanese Americans who were incarcerated during World War II.

Janet Hayakawa is Densho's education specialist. She has taught students and teachers across the country through her work with the Washington State Office of Superintendent of Public Instruction, public television's Thirteen/WNET and New York University.

Workshop content and facilitation is provided by Densho, a Seattle-based nonprofit that encourages the examination of democracy, intolerance, wartime hysteria, civil rights and the responsibilities of citizenship in our increasingly global society. Densho does this through a close examination of the World War II incarceration of Japanese Americans. Funding for the workshop is supported, in part, by a grant from the Japanese American Confinement Sites Grant Program, administered by the National Park Service.
