Artists in National Parks
National Parks are indelible to the adventurous spirits and creative talents of many early-day artists. Through their artwork, painters, writers, and photographers recorded and publicized the natural beauty of the American landscape. Over time they helped to shape conservation values and to promote the creation of many national parks.

Contemporary artists continue this tradition. Their works foster appreciation for the purpose, meaning and value of national parks today. Their artwork may also document changes in our parks that will inform the future. Currently there are over fifty national park areas with Artist-in-Residence Programs.

A jury of professional artists will choose two or three finalists and one alternate. Selection is based on artistic merit, the Statement of Purpose, and the relevance of the artwork and the artist’s project proposal. 2015 residency projects should reflect the park’s centennial theme of wilderness, wildlife and wonder.

Artwork Donations
Participating artists are expected to donate to the park an original piece of artwork from, and representative, of their residency in Rocky Mountain National Park. The park is especially interested in artwork relevant to our 2015 centennial’s theme of wilderness, wildlife and wonder. Donated artwork must be received no later than one year after an artist’s residency. Artwork from visual artists should be framed with UV protective glass and prepared for hanging before donation.

Artists are also required to provide the copyright for this artwork to the National Park Service. The artist retains a royalty-free, non-exclusive use license under the copyright of the art.

How to Apply
Follow the instructions on the enclosed Entry Form. Rocky’s 2015 centennial year will be a memorable time to participate in the park’s Artist-in-Residence Program. We hope you can join us!

The William Allen White Cabin
Selected artists stay in a historic cabin in Moraine Park for two-weeks between June and September. No stipend is provided. This cabin was the summer retreat of William Allen White from 1912 to 1943. White was a Pulitzer Prize-winning writer, a nationally recognized journalist and the editor of the Emporia Gazette in Kansas. His spirit lives on with the contemporary artists who work in his cabin today.

The Selection Process
A jury of professional artists will choose two or three finalists and one alternate. Selection is based on artistic merit, the Statement of Purpose, and the relevance of the artwork and the artist’s project proposal. 2015 residency projects should reflect the park’s centennial theme of wilderness, wildlife and wonder.

Public Presentations
Artists will present two 45-minute public programs during their residency. This interaction can be tailored to an individual’s medium, interest, and experience using only a few hours of one’s stay. Programs can be a demonstration, talk, or a performance. Artists must provide their own supplies for these presentations. Audiovisual equipment and PowerPoint projectors are available. In addition, artists are requested to give a public presentation in their community about their residency experience.

Under those rights, the artist has a license to make use of the artwork for his or her purposes. When artists reproduce artwork for their own purposes, publication information will include the language: “This artwork was produced under the Artist-in-Residence Program at Rocky Mountain National Park.”

The National Park Service will not allow the commercial use of any donated artwork once it is selected and accessioned into the Park’s permanent museum collection. Artwork may be used in exhibits and for educational purposes by Rocky Mountain National Park’s nonprofit cooperating association for their products.

These creative works are exhibited as frequently as possible and are shared with the public through other appropriate means. When not on display, artwork is stored in the park’s environmentally-controlled and secured museum storage facility.

The Artist-in-Residence Program also aspires to perpetuate the memory of William Allen White and preserve his historic cabin, built in 1887.

Intent of the Artist-In-Residence Program
Artwork completed under this program will characterize Rocky Mountain National Park for present and future generations, and offer park visitors an opportunity to see our heritage through the eyes, and ears of the selected artists.

The Artist-in-Residence Program offers professional writers, composers, painters, and performing artists the opportunity to pursue their artistic discipline surrounded by the park’s beauty and tranquility. Rocky will celebrate its 100th anniversary from September 4, 2014 through September 4, 2015. During this time, the park will be celebrating the present and inspiring the future.
