

Papers of Springfield Armory Employees in the SPAR Archival Collection

As of 09/09/2024

The Springfield Armory National Historic Site (SPAR) Archival Collection contains personal papers and working files for over 82 past employees. Some of which were donated by the employee themselves, some by relations of employees, and some through other forms of acquisition. Materials in this category all hold provenance to individuals who were employed by Springfield Armory, either as army officials, or as civilians. These papers generally include copies of correspondence, documents prepared by the employee, reference reports on issue of significance to the employee, news clippings, photographs, and other documents related to the employee's career at Springfield Armory. Generally, the materials reflect the span of an employee's career and, therefore, do not relate to aspects of their life outside of their employment. Researchers should recognize that these materials are heavily "self-curated" by the employee before donation to the SPAR Archival Collection. Most working files do not reflect a complete history of an employee's career nor provide comprehensive information on an issue or project that involved the employee. By their nature, these records tend to reflect projects or work products that an employee is proud of. In addition, the volume of materials varies by individual.

*Collections are closed to research until they are fully cataloged, per NPS policy. This finding aid will be continuously updated as collections are cataloged and made available to the public.
