NOTE.—During the operations in the South, the 22d Kentucky Infantry belonged to D. W. Lindsey's 2d Brigade, of Osterhaus' Division, 13th Army Corps.

The following extracts from the official report of Major General John A. McClelland, of date June 17, 1863, Headquarters 13th Army Corps, Vicksburg, Mississippi, should have been published as a part of the history of the 7th Kentucky Infantry, as also of the 19th Kentucky Infantry; but they were not on file in the Adjutant General's Office at the time the history of each of those Regiments was printed.

[Extracts.]

BATTLE OF CHAMPION HILL.

* * * * "In front of my center, as well as my right, the enemy appeared in great numbers. Garrard's Brigade was hard pressed, and General Osterhaus requested that it should be supported. All of Lawler's Brigade, of Carr's Division, except a reserve of one Regiment, also advanced to support Lindsey's, who had pushed a charge near the mouth of a battery. Lawler's Brigade here cast the trembling balance in our favor.

Himself narrowly escaping the effect of a shell—his men joined Lindsey, and both dashed forward, shooting down the enemy's battery horses, driving away his gunners, and capturing two pieces of cannon."

* * * * "The enemy, thus beaten at all points, fled in confusion, the main body along the road leading to Vicksburg, a fragment to the left of that road. General Carr's Division taking the advance, hotly pressed the former, and Lindsey's and Burbridge's Brigades the latter, until night closed in, each taking many prisoners."

BATTLE OF BIG BLACK RIVER.

* * * * "Osterhaus' Division was ordered to form to the right of the road, Lindsey's Brigade in front, and the remaining two Regiments of Garrard's Brigade obliquely on the left and rear of Lindsey's, to counteract any movement in that direction. My right center and left engaged the enemy with increasing effect; and, dashing forward under a heavy fire across a narrow field, and with fixed bayonets, carried the enemy's works, capturing many prisoners, and routing him. This feat was eminently brilliant, and reflects the highest credit upon the gallant officers and men of General Lawler's and Osterhaus' commands, who achieved it. It was determinate of the success of the day. Most of the enemy escaped to the commanding bluff, on the opposite side of the river, while others, hotly pressed by Benton's Brigade and the right of Lindsey's, were cut off from that escape, and, driven to the left and down the river, upon the left of Lindsey's and the front of Burbridge's Brigades, fell into their hands."

SIEGE OF VICKSBURG—STORMING ON 22<sup>D</sup> OF MAY.

"Five minutes before 10 o'clock the bugle sounded the charge, and, at 10 o'clock, my columns of attack moved forward, and, within fifteen minutes, Lawler's and Landram's Brigades had carried the ditch, slope, and bastion of a fort. Some of the men, emulous of each other, rushed into the fort, finding a piece of artillery, and in time to see the men, who had been serving and supporting it, escape behind another defense commanding the interior of the former. * * * * Within fifteen minutes after Lawler's and Landram's success, Benton's and Burbridge's Brigades, fired by the example, rushed forward and carried the ditch and slope of a heavy earthwork, and planted their colors on the latter."

* * * * "Men never fought more gallantly—nay more desperately. For more than eight long hours they maintained their ground with death-like tenacity; neither the blazing sun nor the deadly fire of the enemy shook them; their constancy and valor filled me with admiration. The spectacle was one never to be forgotten.

"Meantime Osterhaus's and Hovey's forces forming the column of assault on the left, pushed forward, under a severe fire, upon a more extended line, until an enflading fire from a strong redoubt on their left front, and physical exhaustion, compelled them to take shelter behind a ridge. Here they could distinctly hear the words of hostile command. Their skirmishers, however, kept up the conflict. * * * *

"While referring to the reports of Division, Brigade, and Regimental Commanders for particular notice of the officers of their commands most distinguishing themselves, it is proper, as commander of the Corps, that I should recommend Brigadier Generals Hovey, Carr, and Osterhaus for promotion; also, Colonels Slack, Stone, Keigwin, Landram, Lindsey, and Mudd. The skill, valor, and signal services of those officers entitle them to it."
