Introduction

The following roster of the 16th Tennessee Infantry Regiment represents over two years of research limited only by my ability to travel further on my budget. I want to thank the kind staff at the Tennessee State Library and Archives for their dedicated and tireless work. I also want to thank the many descendants of 16th members for sharing family information and other materials that I will be using in a forthcoming book on the 16th. I want to thank Kyle Williams for his assistance on cemetery research, knowing how boring it can be for a nine year old boy to follow his uncle around photographing graves and taking notes. I am especially grateful to my parents, Morris and Katherine Brogden, for their encouragement and my father's help in formatting the cover art. I would also thank my sister Katherine Channell for her invaluable assistance with the word processing.

My original intention was to acquire as much information on as many members of the 16th as possible to assist in historical and genealogical research. As time went on I began to feel that I knew many of these men who represented such a cross section of the Cumberlands. I'm sure that I missed many of them but it was not for want of trying.

The 16th drew men primarily from DeKalb, Putnam, White, Van Buren, Warren and Coffee counties. Many of the men were close relatives and friends. They were mostly farmers and in my opinion represented a "typical" Army of Tennessee regiment throughout the war. The 16th was originally organized in the summer of 1861 and retained it's unit integrity until after the Battle of Franklin on 11/30/1864. After that bloodbath they were consolidated with other regiments to form a single company of the 1st Tennessee Consolidated Infantry Regiment. In that capacity they served until the surrender of the sadly depleted Army of Tennessee at Greensboro N.C. in May of 1865.

How to use this roster.

I entered the information on each individual in the order that I located it. I did not try to correct the records. I chose to enter the information as it existed as solving the riddles can be quite a bit of fun. Some of the information is out right contradictory and other information at times confusing. I found some errors in all the source materials I used and probably made a few myself. Some individuals had a wealth of information others very little. Hopefully these men who deserve to be remembered and revered for their sacrifices will be adequately portrayed.

Below is a list of the abbreviations used for reference material. I arranged the material in the following format. 1) Name, 2) Rank, 3) Company, 4) Sources of Information, and 5) Notes.
