Members of several Tennessee regiments petitioned for him to be recalled to the service to raise an independent command (Camp at Dalton Ga. 2/10/64). In 6/62 he writes to the General (Donelson?) that the men have body lice and uncleanliness to a considerable extent, also that fever and diarrhea prevail to some extent. He also reports that there is a lack of soap and that most of the baggage was lost or stolen so the men do not have a change of clothes. Water is tolerably good. States that desertions are not occurring and will probably cease as long as the men believe that a move against the enemy above the Tennessee river will be made. A number of sick and absent are returning. Notes inadequate transport and suggests an inspection of the Medical Dept. (see letter of resignation 2/4/63). In 4/63 he had a change of mind and wrote directly to President Davis asking for reinstatement in the Army. His request was denied. Buried in Riverside Cemetery in McMinnville.
