The National Register proudly invites you to discover a new travel itinerary, Historic Charleston's Religious and Community Buildings. This itinerary focuses on 42 historic places that tell the stories of Charleston's religious and community history over the past 300 years. Historic Charleston's Religious and Community Buildings was created through a partnership between the National Register of Historic Places, the City of Charleston's Department of Planning and Urban Development, the National Conference of State Historic Preservation Officers (NCSHPO), and the National Alliance of Preservation Commissions (NAPC). It is available here: National Register of Historic Places Home.

The National Register proudly invites you to discover a new travel itinerary, Historic Charleston's Religious and Community Buildings. This itinerary focuses on 42 historic places that tell the stories of Charleston's religious and community history over the past 300 years. Historic Charleston's Religious and Community Buildings was created through a partnership between the National Register of Historic Places, the City of Charleston's Department of Planning and Urban Development, the National Conference of State Historic Preservation Officers (NCSHPO), and the National Alliance of Preservation Commissions (NAPC). It is available here: National Register of Historic Places Home.

Discover the Places that Make America Great!

The definitive guide to the country's National Historic Landmarks is now available. NATIONAL LANDMARKS, AMERICA'S TREASURES: The National Park Foundation's Complete Guide to National Historic Landmarks was written by S. Allen Chambers, Jr., with a foreword by Hillary Rodham Clinton.

National Historic Landmarks are nationally significant buildings, structures, sites, districts, and objects officially designated by the Secretary of the Interior. Chambers writes: "The diversity that characterizes our nation's heritage is documented by nearly 2,300 National Historic Landmarks...reflecting almost every imaginable important aspect of our nation's history. The range of properties represented in the program reflects changing perceptions about which events, ideas, and experiences have most influenced American history....They are places where significant historical events occurred, where prominent Americans worked or lived, that represent the ideas that shaped the nation, that provided important information about our past, or that are outstanding examples of design or construction." Read about such nationally significant places as the Mark Twain House (Connecticut), Helen Keller's childhood home (Alabama), the Little Tokyo Historic District (California), and the site of the first detonation of a nuclear device (New Mexico). Organized by state and county, the book describes each National Historic Landmark, and includes 380 illustrations.
