Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a reproduction if the document does not infringe the privacy rights of an individual, group, or corporation. These specified conditions of authorized use include:

- non-commercial and non-profit study, scholarship, or research, or teaching
- criticism, commentary, or news reporting
- as a NPS preservation or security copy
- as a research copy for deposit in another institution

If a user later uses a copy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," the user may be personally liable for copyright, privacy, or publicity infringement. This institution's permission to obtain a photographic, xerographic, digital, or other copy of a document doesn't indicate permission to publish, exhibit, perform, reproduce, sell, distribute, or prepare derivative works from this document without first obtaining permission from the copyright holder and from any private individual, group, or corporation shown or otherwise recorded.

Permission to publish, exhibit, perform, reproduce, prepare derivative works from, sell, or otherwise distribute the item must be obtained by the user separately in writing from the holder of the original copyright (or if the creator is dead from his/her heirs) as well as from any individual(s), groups, or corporations whose name, image, recorded words, or private information (e.g., employment information) may be reproduced in the source material. The holder of the original copyright isn't necessarily the National Park Service. The National Park Service is not legally liable for copyright, privacy, or publicity infringement when materials are wrongfully used after being provided to researchers for "fair use."

HISTORY

During its first century, Yellowstone National Park was known as the place to see and interact with bears. Hundreds of people gathered nightly to watch bears feed on garbage in the park's dumps. Enthusiastic visitors fed bears along the roads and behaved recklessly to take photographs.

Beginning in 1931, park managers recorded an average of 48 bear-inflicted human injuries and more than 100 incidents of property damage each year in Yellowstone. In 1960, the park implemented a bear management program directed primarily at black bears and designed to reduce the number of bear-caused human injuries and property damages and to re-establish bears in a natural state. In 1970, Yellowstone initiated a more intensive program that included eliminating open-pit garbage dumps inside the park with the intention of returning bears to a natural diet of plant and animal foods.

In 1983, the park implemented a new grizzly bear management program that emphasized habitat protection in backcountry areas. The park established "bear management areas" that restricted recreational use where grizzly bears were known to concentrate. The goals were to minimize bear-human interactions that might lead to habituation of bears to people, to prevent human-caused displacement of bears from prime food sources, and to decrease the risk of bear-caused human injury in areas with high levels of bear activity. This program continues today.

Late 1880s: Bears begin gathering at night to feed on garbage behind park hotels.
1910: First incidents of bears seeking human food along park roads.
1916: First confirmed bear-caused human fatality.
1931: Park begins keeping detailed records of bear-inflicted human injuries, property damage, and bear control actions.
1931–1969: average of 48 bear-inflicted human injuries and more than 100 incidents of property damage occur annually.
1970: New bear management program implemented to restore bears to a diet of natural foods and to reduce property damage and human injuries, including strict enforcement of regulations prohibiting the feeding of bears, requiring proper storage of human food and garbage, all garbage cans in the park converted to a bear-proof design, and garbage dumps closed within and adjacent to the park.
1975: The grizzly bear listed as a threatened species under the Endangered Species Act, which required recovering the species to a self-sustaining population.
1983: New grizzly bear management program implemented that emphasized habitat protection in backcountry areas.
1993: Recovery plan implemented with three specific recovery goals to be met for six consecutive years.
2000: Draft Conservation Strategy for the Grizzly Bear in the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem is completed.
2002: Conservation Strategy is approved with implementation planned for when the grizzly is removed from the threatened species list.
2003: Recovery goals are met for the sixth year in a row.
2005: U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service proposes removing the grizzly bear from the threatened species list.

2006: The Grizzly Bear Recovery Plan is modified to update methods of estimating population size and sustainable mortality.

2007: The Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem distinct population segment of grizzly bear population is removed from the threatened species list. Conservation Strategy is implemented. Several groups file lawsuits challenging the decision.

2009: A federal district judge overturned the delisting ruling, placing grizzly bears back on the threatened species list citing: (1) the Conservation Strategy was unenforceable, and (2) that the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service did not adequately consider the impacts of the potential loss of whitebark pine nuts, a grizzly bear food source.

2010: The U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service appeals the decision to keep the grizzly bear on the threatened species list.

2011: An appeals court rules the grizzly bear should remain on the threatened species list. The court determined that the Conservation Strategy did provide adequate regulatory mechanisms, but upheld the lower court ruling that the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service did not sufficiently address the potential impacts from reduction of whitebark pine and other foods.

2013: Yellowstone Ecosystem Subcommittee, the Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee, and Interagency Grizzly Bear Study Team recommend that grizzly bears be removed from the threatened species list because alternative foods are available and the reduction of whitebark pine is not having a significant impact on bears at this time.

2017: U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service removes the Yellowstone population of grizzly bears from the threatened species list.

2018: A U.S. District Judge restored protections for the Yellowstone-area population of grizzly bears under the Endangered Species Act.

BEAR MANAGEMENT RECORDS

CATALOG NUMBER RG01-BEAR (YELL 69700)

VOLUME 59 Linear Feet

DESCRIPTION This collection contains administrative records pertaining to the management of bears in Yellowstone National Park under the administration of the National Park Service. The records consist of reports, policies, correspondence, and project files and document both scientific research and administrative management of bears.

The largest amount of material, by volume, is comprised of field data documenting bear sightings and incidents involving bears. Both series contain a relatively complete set of information over significant lengths of time. Although the information recorded varied somewhat over time and by reporter/recorder, the data provides a key source of information regarding bears in the Yellowstone ecosystem over much of the 20th century and into the 21st. Of special note: the information is recorded both well before and long after the major change to bear management policy in 1970.

The files relating to the Interagency Grizzly Bear Study Team (IGBST) and the Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee (IGBC) are included in this collection, dating back to the establishment of the IGBST in 1973. These include reports, minutes, some research, radio tracking data, and task force actions and decisions. Task forces cover everything from bear closures to investigations into fatalities.

Management files and correspondence along with research reports demonstrate what changes Bear Management practices have undergone since their inception in Yellowstone National Park. They also address the questions of grizzly bear status as threatened over the past several decades and public response to management actions.

The wide array of documents offers grounding for research regarding the management of bears in Yellowstone National Park, public response, and the trends of bear activity and sightings for approximately sixty years.

ORGANIZATION: Documents are arranged chronologically within five series: Series I: Bear Sightings, Series II: Bear Incidents and Dead Bear Reports, Series III: Interagency Grizzly Bear Study Team, Series IV: Bear Management Correspondence and General Files, Series V: Bear Management Activities.

PROVENANCE Transferred to the archives by various park offices and staff, particularly the offices involved in bear management.

RESTRICTIONS	Yes. Some bear incident reports include medical information restricted by federal HIPAA law.
ASSOCIATED MATERIALS	Incident Reports, Protection and Safety Records (RG 02), Yellowstone National Park Combined Archives

SERIES DESCRIPTIONS

Bear Sightings, 1940-2008

This series contains bear logs, individual reports of bear sightings, and weekly or bi-weekly sighting summary reports. Sightings by rangers, visitors, and researchers are documented. Information recorded includes date, location, and type of bear. This appears to be a complete, or nearly complete, set of data points maintained for a significant length of time.

The sightings are compiled by district or sub-district, depending upon the year, with later years more often organized by district. The series is arranged chronologically and then alphabetically by location.

Bear Incidents and Dead Bear Reports, 1938-2006

The contents of this series include individual reports regarding injuries and property damage caused by bears. Also included in this series are reports regarding dead bears and the likely cause behind the death such as control, natural causes, or human-caused accident. Property damage and bear-caused injury reports include a brief description of the bear (if known) and a short description of the damage caused. Annual incident summaries are often not limited to the year in question, but instead add annual updates to a comprehensive list of incidents.

Some documents in this series are restricted due to HIPAA-covered medical information. Bear incidents may also be found in Record Group 02: Protection and Safety. The series is arranged chronologically.

Interagency Grizzly Bear Study Team, 1973-2008

This series contains files of the Interagency Grizzly Bear Study Team (IGBST), the Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee (IGBC), and task forces thereof which related to Yellowstone National Park. These files include meeting minutes, correspondence, reports, and bear tracking data. The tracking data covers both flight reports and radio tracking, including frequencies. This series provides a solid look at the history and trends of activity within IGBST and IGBC as well as patterns and trends of the collared and radioed bears.

Bear Management Correspondence and General Files, 1929-2001

This series consists of correspondence and files of the bear management office. The correspondence covers topics varying from general inquiries to complaints or protests over management actions taken, there are even a couple of letters in this series addressed to “Yogi Bear.”

Bear Management Activities, 1922-2004

This series includes records detailing actions taken in the course of bear management, research regarding bears, reports, presentations, public meetings, and specimen and bear requests. This series taken as a whole gives a look at how bear management operated in Yellowstone National Park over the course of the twentieth century. It also includes area management files (including reports of bear jams and bear closures) which can be used to examine trends and practices in concert with the Bear Sightings data in Series I.
